Chest DEPARTMENT

Scientific Day

21th March 2022

Welcome Message

Dear colleagues, it is our great honor to invite all our eminent scientists as well as young researchers who are interested in pulmonary medicine to attend the scientific session of Chest Department, Ain Shams University. In the past two years, we bravely played a great role as front-liners against the COVID 19 pandemic. We enhanced our experience, and cooperation with the other specialties, yet we did not restrict the scientific research to this field. There were many updates regarding the patient care, recent guidelines, and screening programs

It is our pleasure to welcome you at the conference and we greatly appreciate your valuable attendance, participation, and sharing your ideas and queries to unveil the recent challenges in the field of pulmonary practice

01:40 - 02:30 pm	Violence against Women in COVID-19 and its impact on children	 Prof. Amira Elbatrawy Professor of Psychiatry, Okasha Institute of Psychiatry, Faculty of Medicine, Ain Shams University, Giza, Egypt

Abstract: Health cannot be fragmented or reduced to a single causal factor and women's mental health is no exception. Good mental health is intrinsically important, conferring a subjective sense of emotional wellbeing on the individual woman and extrinsically important, representing a significant resource to the broader society in which she lives and works. For decades has the teratogenic effect of psychiatric treatments been a hot topic of discussion and an appealing field of study.

Lately, a considerable amount of interest is directed towards revealing the impact of maternal distress and exposure to stressful life events on offspring. Evidence is now available to reveal such a relationship and to address an important inquiry; Can maternal distress affect an offspring intrauterine life and beyond?

Since March 2020, with WHO declaration: "COVID-19 Pandemic", several challenges have been posed such social distancing and official lockdown in several countries, which caused an important psychosocial crisis and mental health concerns especially for women mental health. Since the outbreak of COVID-19, emerging data and reports from those on the front lines, have shown that all types of violence against women and girls, particularly domestic violence, has intensified with its direct and indirect effect on children. Psychiatry has a key role to play in protecting and promoting those rights, now more than ever.

Abstract: Geriatric psychiatry is a rapidly growing specialty. It is important to know that Depression is not a normal consequence of aging. Although depression in the elderly is a common problem, only a small percentage gets the help they need. There are many reasons depression in older adults is so often overlooked. Some assume seniors have good reason to be down. Depression treatment is just as effective for elderly adults as it is for younger people. Therapy, support groups, and medication can all help relieve symptoms. In this workshop the depression in old age will be discussed in detail.

Whenever we mention Geriatric psychiatry Dementia is the first disorder that cross our mind. There are many types of dementia, but the most common is Alzheimer's disease. Early detection of demented patients helps in proper management and better prognosis particularly those with known etiology for this memory decline. People with dementia generally require high levels of care and the Caregivers may face many obstacles. They are at increased risk for burden and stress.

02:00 - 02:30 pm	Immune mediated neuropathy	 Riham Mahfouz Assistant Lecturer of Neurology

Abstract: Weakness is a relatively common clinical symptom which can indicate an underlying myopathic or neuropathic process and can lead to significant morbidity. Inflammatory myopathies include a group of autoimmune disorders affecting primarily the muscles and sometimes associated with other systems involvement, while Immune mediated neuropathies which can be presented by acute or chronic clinical picture are a group of conditions caused by immune response against autoantigens in different parts of the peripheral nervous system. The emerging use of autoantibodies as a biomarker for these conditions has aided in early diagnosis as well as detecting other systems affection, subsequently leading to a more comprehensive plan of management.

03:30 - 04:00 pm	Improving quality of life with multiple sclerosis	 Dr. Sherehan Ahmed Specialist of nutrition, Ase International University Diploma of nutrition

Abstract: Multiple sclerosis (MS) is a potentially disabling disease of the brain and spinal cord. In MS, the immune system attacks the protective sheath (myelin) that covers nerve fibers and causes communication problems between your brain and the rest of your body. Eventually, the disease can cause permanent damage or deterioration of the nerves. Signs and symptoms of MS vary widely and depend on the amount of nerve damage and which nerves are affected. Some people with severe MS may lose the ability to walk independently or at all, while others may experience long periods of remission without any new symptoms. There's no cure for multiple sclerosis. However, treatments can help speed recovery from attacks, modify the course of the disease and manage symptoms. Multiple sclerosis signs and symptoms may differ greatly from person to person and over the course of the disease depending on the location of affected nerve fibers. Symptoms often affect movement, such as: Numbness or weakness in one or more, electric-shock sensations especially bending the neck forward (Lhermitte sign), lack of coordination or unsteady gait, vision problems are also common, including: Partial or complete loss of vision, often with pain during eye movement, Prolonged double vision and blurry vision.
